A beginner s star-book, by Kelvin McKready. N. Y. Putnam (Mr) 1912. 148p. illus. maps. 27cm. $2.50 net. Aims primarily to enable any one without technical equipment to gain a real knowledge of the sky through personal observation. In his directions for studying the heavens and locating the stars and planets, as well as in the sections describing the stellar and solar systems and discussing the use of simple optical instruments, the author is explicit and definite. A particularly valuable chapter lists and describes over a hundred telescopic objects, giving their names, legends and the chief facts concerning them. For setting the amateur on the right road to a broad, general and thorough acquaintance with the northern sky there is no better book. --Nation, 94:646, 27 Je 12. Abundant illustrations and excellent charts. Nitobe, Inazo Ota. The Japanese nation. N.Y.Putnam (0)1912. 334p. map. $1.50 net. These twelve chapters comprise eight lectures delivered before American universities as exchange professor in 1911-12, and four other addresses. They epitomize the mature opinions of one of the foremost Japanese scholars and educators, a graduate of an American college, on national characteristics, religion and morals, education--on which he is peculiarly fitted to speak, and the relations between Japan and America, and discuss the material basis of Japanese civilization. It is what we desire to know of a foreign culture told to us with a charm and precision of diction that can fairly be called astonishing. --Nation, 95:565,...
